FINDINGS OF FACT

1. The petitioner (CARES # [REDACTED]) is a resident of Jackson County.
2. The county agency denied the petitioner's FoodShare application on March 18, 2013, because his net income exceeded the program's limit. When denying he application, the agency determined that his children could not be included in household because they were already part of their mother's.

3. The petitioner and the children's mother share placement equally, with placement alternating every other week.

DISCUSSION

The amount of a FoodShare allotment depends upon net income and the number of persons in the household. The petitioner's net income was determined to exceed the program's limit. This occurred because the agency did not allow him to include his two children in his household; the children were already part of their mother's household when the petitioner applied for benefits.

One cannot be considered part of more than one household in the same month. 7 CFR § 273.3(a). The federal rules provide no clear answer to what happens when a child lives with both parents. The rules do allow state agencies to create a policy where federal rules do not clearly address which parent's household the child is considered a part of, provided "the policy is applied fairly, equitably and consistently throughout the State." 7 C.F.R. § 273.1(c).

Wisconsin's policy, which is found in the FoodShare Wisconsin Handbook, § 3.2.1.1, provides the following guidance in these situations:

Children are included in the household where they reside when they are under the care and control of a parent or other caretaker in that household. There may be situations when the residence of a child is not easily determined. There are many methods that can be used to determine the child's residence. If the residence of a child is questionable, court documents can be used to determine if there is a primary caretaker designated. It may be a situation of joint custody and a 50-50 custody split. If one parent is not designated as primary caretaker, the parents can be asked to decide. Individuals can only be included in one food unit.

Because individuals can only be part of one household at a time, as a practical matter, when both parents have equal placement of the children, the parent who applies for FoodShare first can claim them as part of his or her FoodShare household.

The petitioner and his children's mother alternate physical placement of their children weekly, giving each placement 50% of the time. Because the children are already part of their mother's household, the petitioner cannot claim them as part of his. There is no challenge to the agency's calculations, and I find no error in them. Therefore, I must uphold the decision.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The agency correctly counted the petitioner's children as part of their mother's household.

THEREFORE, it is

The petitioner's appeal is dismissed.
