DISCUSSION

Personal care services are “medically oriented activities related to assisting a recipient with activities of daily living necessary to maintain the recipient in his or her place of residence in the community.” Wis. Admin. Code §DHS 107.112(1)(a). Covered services include the following:

1. Assistance with bathing;
2. Assistance with getting in and out of bed;
3. Teeth, mouth, denture and hair care;
4. Assistance with mobility and ambulation including use of walker, cane or crutches;
5. Changing the recipient's bed and laundering the bed linens and the recipient's personal clothing;
6. Skin care excluding wound care;
7. Care of eyeglasses and hearing aids;
8. Assistance with dressing and undressing;
9. Toileting, including use and care of bedpan, urinal, commode or toilet;
10. Light cleaning in essential areas of the home used during personal care service activities;
11. Meal preparation, food purchasing and meal serving;
12. Simple transfers including bed to chair or wheelchair and reverse; and
13. Accompanying the recipient to obtain medical diagnosis and treatment.

Wis. Admin. Code, §DHS 107.112(b).

Personal care workers can spend no more than one-third of their time performing housekeeping activities. Like all medical assistance services, PCW services must be medically necessary and cost effective. Wis. Admin. Code, §DHS 107.02(3)(e)1 and 3.

The DHCAA uses the Personal Care Screening Tool, a computer program it believes will allow it to consistently determine the number of hours required by each recipient. The screening tool allots a specific amount of time in each area the recipient requires help, which the DHCAA’s reviewer can then adjust to account for variables missing from the screening tool’s calculations.

In this case, after the time for transfers was added back, the primary change was in the services incidental to the care services. The assessor based the incidental services on petitioner living alone, but the DHCAA consultant noted references to petitioner being married and living with family. When family members reside with the recipient it is expected that they will be partially responsible for tasks such as cleaning, laundry, meal preparation, and shopping, and thus the recipient does not need the same amount of paid assistance in those areas. Thus if family members live in the household, the DHCAA allows one-fourth of the time needed for medically related tasks to be approved for incidental services. See Office of the Inspector General case summary dated September 16, 2014, Attachment 12, page 2.

Although petitioner is married, she and her husband are separated. I asked petitioner if she lived with family members, and she initially said no, but then noted that her son is living with her under the terms of his probation. Regardless of the reason he lives there, he still can assist with incidental tasks, and thus I conclude that the reduction in hours is appropriate. If petitioner’s son moves out at any time, an amendment to the authorization for additional incidental time can be requested.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

The DHCAA correctly reduced petitioner's PCW hours to account for her living with an adult family member.

THEREFORE, it is ORDERED

That the petition for review herein be and the same is hereby dismissed.
