Subject: Access to Transitory Records

The recent action by the Public Records Board to change the definition of "transitory records" is an affront to Wisconsin's Open Records laws. I would appreciate it if the Public Records Board would reconsider its decision to alter the definition of transitory records. Mr. Blessing's explanation for the change is disingenuous at best, and possibly criminal. Quit jerking around with our (i.e., the public, the people whom you serve and who pay your salaries) access to public records.

Thank You,
