Subject: Comment on the August clarification of transitory records

To whom it may concern:

I am appalled that the Public Records Board would allow state employees to not save texts, social media posts and other forms of electronic communication when it pertains to state business. This is absurd and only shields state employees from having to account for their actions. If a physical copy of a state business communication must be saved, why would the board allow officials to delete electronic messages accomplishing the same task as a paper memo?

State employees need to be held accountable to the tax payers - elected officials included. Open government and open records are necessary for this.

Rescind this clarification.

Sincerely,
Megan Leigl
