To: Wisconsin Public Records Board

Wisconsin has always been known as proponent of open government accepting this as necessary in a democracy to ensure citizens have accurate information when deciding on governmental decisions. Your move last summer to limit access to information should lead to all members of government involved loosing their jobs.

The fact the Gov. Walker immediately used the new directives to refuse information to the Milwaukee Journal certainly speaks of collusion between your department and the governor's office.

I hope there is a huge response from Wisconsin citizens resulting in politicians and government departments will be forced to rectify this and will keep government records available to all for many years to come.
