Citizens must have access to information, whether it be electronic or in other forms. The way these actions weakening the public's right to know have taken place are reason enough to maintain an open, accessible means of obtaining information. Burying the provisions to reduce public access in administrative rules or in lengthy legislative bills clearly disrespects my rights as a citizen and treats me like a dupe who can easily be conned.

This issue is certainly an example of over reach and was not among any of the issues that any candidate brought up during their campaign. To me, it is a campaign issue now.
