Subject: Electronic Records

To Whom It May Concern:

Wisconsin has a long tradition of open records access. The Public Records Board has unilaterally, and I might opine, unlawfully disregarded this tradition and right recently by declaring such records as e-mail, Twitter, Facebook and other such "electronic" communications as to be "transitory" in nature and excluded from public access record keeping.

This veiled attempt to over reach its authority, thereby giving all public employees the ability to "hide" such communications from public scrutiny under cloak of "transient communications," is disingenuous and a fallacy of the highest degree.

Please rescind this action and make communications on how my tax dollars are spent, Wisconsin government makes decisions, who attends policy meetings, and a host of other "public" right to know subjects that can be excluded under this ruling available to all the citizens of Wisconsin.

Shame on you for creating a secret way to circumvent our rights to open access of information, especially in light of the "non legislative" nature of your authority.
