We are no longer in the days of paper and ink appointment books, ledgers, diaries, memorandum and travel logs. More and more public business, like personal and commercial communications and records are kept and maintained digitally. Therefore, it is unconscionable to act to close these digital records to the public scrutiny and except them from the Wisconsin Open Records law. I intend to hold my legislators and the administration responsible for enacting such a subversion of our state's long proud history of clean and open government. Keep Wisconsin government clean, accountable and open to the public ... or there will be consequences at the polls.
