Subject: Electronic communications

Please know that I believe that all communications among politicians, lobbies the, governors and other s who have a role in writing and voting in the public trust should be in the public domain. The open records law should be enforced for all meetings and written communication.

Publicly elected law makers are employees of the public.

They should be completely transparent in the dealings in office.

The public, journalist, bloggers, any interested party should be able to ask and receive all communications that go into the process of law making.

They should Have faith that the people who elected them will agree and approve of their interactions.

If they are doing things that they fear would not be met with approval, they probably shouldn't be doing them.

Sincerely

Marty Lubing
