What are you and your cohorts trying to hide? If you're not hiding something than why the secretive change to limit access to public records? If I'm mistaken in my belief, please tell me where I have gone astray. I've heard your excuse that the change was "minor clarifying language". Yet that was proven untrue the very next day when the administration used used the board's decision as an excuse to hide records about an effort to send bad taxpayer dollars after good.

How did the administration know about this while the public knew nothing about it? Please tell me how that occurred. Was it because the directive to change the rules came from the administration? It certainly appears that way to us the public.

Aren't you suppose to be representing us, the public, rather than the administration? After all the title to your board is The Public Records Board.

A clarifying response would be much appreciated.
