Dear Sirs and Madams:

Public records belong all of us, and they should be retained in every case. This includes "transitory messages" of "temporary usefulness", such as texts, emails, Facebook posts, tweets and other electronic modes of communication. I categorically oppose any attempts by legislators or executive bureaucrats to undermine the transparency that should be part of how Wisconsin's government does business, and I urge you to use the power of your position so that the actions taken by the Public Records Board last summer are rescinded. The citizens of this state and media outlets should have access to these records.

Sincerely yours,

James B. Anello
