Subject: Keep public records public

The Public Records Board decision last August to shield many forms of electronic communication from the public was an affront to our state's admirable tradition of keeping the workings of government transparent, while at the same time being laughably illogical. Electronic communication modes are here to stay, used by many people multiple times a day. If government employees could cover their tracks simply by texting, the public would be permanently in the dark. Reverse your August decision, and let the light shine.
