Subject: Keep the law as is was prior to August, 2015

There was a perfectly good law to keep all the checks in place for the open records needed to run our state government prior to August. Keep these intact or make changes for the personal records safety as the John Doe investigation showed that many records of many private citizens were confiscated and only recently were they told what was taken. I think that there should be a way for people to defend themselves from the government just going into private emails and all computer records even if unrelated to the reason for the investigation. Just because a person got an email from a person in the state government does not mean that all their contacts and other information should be open for public access. It doesn't matter if we voted Democratic or Republican we need to have some control of our personal emails. The use of government computers should be more open to observation by the powers of the state if used to cause a problem or having done something illegal.
