Subject: Limit Access to Public Records

You MUST rescind your actions to limit the access to any forms of communications by public employees. Government should be open and transparent to the taxpayers who employ these government employees and officials. I would have thought we learned this lesson by recent events including the whole Hillary Clinton mess. By changing the definition of transitory records, you merely provide a giant loophole or veil of secrecy by which all manner government business can be hidden from the public eye.

I urge you to keep all government business and communication open to public scrutiny.

Kind regards,

Bill
