Subject: Limiting public officials' records scrutiny...a resounding NO!

Good morning,

I'd just like to add my voice to the countless others who have trouble understanding, let alone condoning, the Republican legislature's continued efforts to severely limit accountability for their actions in office...in this particular case by denying public access to electronic records.

The Public Records Board needs to rescind its action from late summer limiting such access, and embrace openness in government that has been sorely lacking during the Walker administration. You don't make people more accountable for their actions by giving them the means to hide such accountability.

Cheers,

Greg Hatt
