Subject: Open records access

Hello,

The attempts of the Walker administration or any elected official or government employee to limit/restrict public access to government records and communication is wrong.

Wisconsin residents need to be able to have access and review communication and documents that our elected officials create and use during their decision making process. It is just common sense that the public have the ability and legal rights to review the documents used when lawmakers are negotiating, writing and proposing laws in addition to when they are making decisions when spending our tax dollars.

Any attempt to restrict public access to government records, electronic communications, emails, etc. used in their decision making process should not be allowed.

Please consider my comments in your decision making process

Thanks,

Dan Navin
