I have been reading with interest about your secret decision last summer about "transitory messages."

Wisconsin has a long and proud history of clean and open government. Since 2010, that history has been attacked from every angle by our current governor and legislators.

The public has a right to know about government business. I vote in every election, and I am watching. I am not alone. There will eventually be consequences for lawmakers making these changes.

Keep Wisconsin records open. We already know there is a propensity for secret emails. Do not allow this loophole to be created. We know the governor cited your action the very next day, so we know he is behind this, just as he was behind the July Open Records sneak orchestrated by Robin Vos.

Ironically, the names and addresses of those whose signed the recall petition are not only open, but part of a database used to blacklist citizens.

I say no. Don't do it.
