Subject: Restriction on public access to electronic communication

I would like to oppose my objection to the limits on open records with regard to electronic communication.

In today's world, much business is conducted via electronic submission ie emails, texting etc. To not include those records of communication as open records is to create great secrecy in government.

I am fundamentally opposed to this. This is not "government by the people for the people" at all.

I urge you to not allow legislation which would limit open records in this way. Electronic communication is just that - communication - and should be subject to public perusal.

Sincerely,

Susan Putra
