Subject: Stop creeping corruption

Under the Walker administration and bolstered by the Republican legislature, there has been a direct frontal assault on government accountability and transparency. To reclassify these electronic documents as transitory is not only technologically ignorant but would serve to put another wound in an already critical patient. Although I have little hope that the administration will make the right decision nor that the Republican legislature will change the law, I do believe that as more and more of these corruptive practices become public, that the voters will grow sick and tired of this nonsense and rightly throw Walker and his Republican cronies out. We can only pray that the lingering effects do not forever stain our government.
