With a sitting governor who has shown willingness to conduct government business in secret during his tenure as Milwaukee County Executive, you should be looking to strengthen the rules on the retention of all forms of digital communication instead of downplaying their importance.

In my own daily life, text messages, Facebook and Twitter make up to vast majority of my non verbal communications, because of their ease and speed. I would imagine that our elected officials, who are dealing with many issues and constituents, also take advantage of the convenience of these methods of communication in their official capacities. There is no reason to exclude these forms of communication from current laws and rules.
